Autumnal Coloring and Alluring Sunshine Make the Capital a Delightful Spot—Miss Vanderbilt's Wedding Set for December 4.

WASHINGTON is now being tinged with autumnal coloring and the sunshine, while dazling and alluring, is none the less a bit snappy. Early candle light finds pedestrians hurrying on their way home, to stir up the blood, and in the morning unmistakable signs of Jack Frost are to be discovered everywhere in the tree tops and on drooping plants.

The season in the mountains is coming to a close, the last of the runs to the hounds are being arranged, and house parties are soon to be a thing of the past in the Berkshires. Long Island, after its two very successful horse shows, was occupied last week by the opening of the Westchester Racing Association season, which was the meeting place for many fashionable people not loyal to larger race tracks, but who are to be met at smaller ones, thus adding a social side to these meetings.

The women, who are regular attendants generally, have a husband whose interest in the turf needs sympathetic support, and whose consolation in time of losses often is more than welcome to that same companion. Many of the women are known never to place a bet, but nevertheless they can, from intimate acquaintance with the horses, their pedigrees, and achievements, pick a winner.

It is now stated that the wedding of Miss Gladys Vanderbilt to Count Szechenyi will take place December 4 at the Esplanade, their beautiful Newport palace, which will be kept open until after the wedding hospitalities are dispensed there.

Count Ladislav Szechenyi is a chamberlain of the King and a lieutenant of hussars. He is the youngest of several brothers. The eldest, Count Dionys Szechenyi, is now minister plenipotentiary and counselor of the Austrian Embassy at Paris; Countess Dionys Szechenyi is a member of the princely and ducal house of Caraniam Chimay. A cousin, Count Louis Szechenyi, was, until recently, counselor of the Austrian Embassy at Washington, and is now officiating in a similar capacity in London. The father of Count Ladislav was for many years Austrian Ambassador at Berlin, where he enjoyed the warm friendship of three successive German Emperors, and contributed to establish the intimate relations which now subsist between Austria and Germany.

Young Count Ladislav Szechenyi is a son of one of the oldest families of Hungary. He received the title of count some three hundred years or more ago, and the name may be found on almost every page of Magyar history. An interesting member of the family is Count Edmund Szechenyi, who makes his home at Constantinople. He first achieved prominence by navigating a little yacht of his own up the Danube, and through the Main, Rhine, Marne, and Seine to Paris, which he reached in time for the international exhibition in 1887.
